

Biden Administration Ends Federal COVID Vaccine Mandates Marking End of Authoritarian Policies

The Biden administration announced on Monday it would end most federal COVID-19 vaccine mandates next week, rolling back the tyrannical government power that forced millions of Americans to subject themselves to an ineffective experimental vaccine associated with blood clots, cardiac failure, neurological injuries, and death.

In a press release, the White House said vaccine requirements would end on May 11 for federal employees, federal contractors, and international air travelers. Additionally, HHS and DHS announced they would begin the process to end their vaccine requirements for Head Start educators, CMS-certified healthcare facilities, and certain noncitizens at the border.

“While vaccination remains one of the most important tools in advancing the health and safety of employees and promoting the efficiency of workplaces,” the White House said, “we are now in a different phase of our response when these measures are no longer necessary.”

The Biden administration in 2021 implemented vaccine requirements even though many Americans already had natural immunity. Although the administration attributes vaccination to the decline in hospitalizations and COVID deaths, there is no legitimate science to support those claims.

President Biden’s forced vaccination policies resulted in billion-dollar profits for pharmaceutical companies, as nearly 270 million Americans received at least one shot of a COVID-19 vaccine.

According to the most recent data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, this has come at the cost of 1,550,099 reported adverse events following COVID vaccination, including 290,393 reports of serious injuries and 35,219 deaths. However, these numbers represent only a very small percentage of actual adverse events – estimated to be as much as 35 times higher.

Medical experts, including those who were advocates of mandates during the previous three years, now agree the need for vaccine requirements has diminished as the virus has faded.

Dr. Paul Auwaerter, clinical director in the infectious diseases division at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, said that although vaccines help reduce the chances of hospitalization and death – claims that have not been scientifically proven – the vaccine no longer prevent transmission, a key fact revealed in 2021 before vaccine mandates were even implemented.

“The decision about whether to be vaccinated will once again be largely between a doctor and patient, not the government,”

Dr. Auwaerter said. “People have developed their own sense of risk assessment and need for immunizations,” he added as if Americans didn’t possess these qualities when the government forced them to roll up their sleeves.

Vaccine mandates will end on the same day the COVID-19 public health emergency is scheduled to end. The Trump administration first declared a public health emergency on Jan. 31, 2020. In addition, other COVID policies will cease to exist, marking the long-anticipated end to the government’s authoritarian pandemic response.
